

Dear All,

Now that the weather has cooled down a bit here in the UK, I've managed to drag myself back indoors and do some research around new fabrics. My usual suppliers have been helpful as ever and I have also been in touch with some that I have not used before, so there should be a steady flow of new and exciting fabrics to try out.

Those of you who have been enjoying my translucent "onion-skin" fabric will be pleased to hear that there is a new non-ripstop version now available Code: uu04-plwh which has a super-sheer look and feel:

I've added it to my Sizes/Fabrics page and the Fabric Galleries, so you can now order any of my Design Your Own products in this fabric if you wish.

I've also added a new shade to my range of generally available Pertex-type Technical Nylon fabrics, namely Gold gloss Code: px15-gold This fabric is a little thicker than most of the other Pertex-type fabrics that I use, but it has the same weight as usual and is nice and glossy with a great feel to it.

The Red gloss Pertex-type nylon Code: px08-redg is now of the same type as the gold, as I have run out of the previous batch. The shade is slightly more of a cherry than a pillar-box red, but it's every bit as nice and glossy as the stuff that I used to have!:

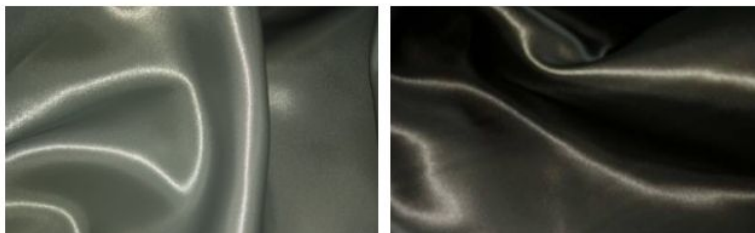

In terms of brand-new fabrics, I have come across a few that I would like to share exclusively with my signed-up ShinyShortzRyan.com members. This will help me to control the rate at which I get through the fabrics and will mean that I can make sure that I don't suddenly run out of it due to a rush in demand. I only have small quantities of these and I'll be unlikely to get hold of them again, so once they're gone, they're gone! The price to you is no different to the rest of my fabrics, even if they are that little bit out of the ordinary!

PU-COATED NYLON
